ANTECEDENTES

The United Nations Institute for Training and Research (UNITAR) is proud to announce the sixth edition of World Negotiation Day with the generous supported by the Doha Forum. Doha World Negotiation Day 2026 will take place in collaboration with the much-anticipated Doha Forum, in Doha (Qatar) on December 7th 2026 at Sheraton Grand (Doha Forum).

At a time of heightened geopolitical polarization, increasing fragmentation and declining confidence in multilateralism, trust has emerged as a defining challenge for contemporary diplomacy. In an increasingly complex international environment, the ability to build and sustain trust is essential not only for preserving dialogue, but also for enabling effective negotiation, fostering consensus and advancing collective action. DWND will examine trust-building as a critical foundation for effective multilateral negotiation. It will explore how Member States, international organizations and other stakeholders can rebuild confidence in diplomatic processes, collective commitments and the institutions that underpin the multilateral system. DWMD will also examine what trust means in today's multilateral context, the factors that have contributed to its erosion, and the practical approaches through which it can be strengthened. Particular attention will be given to the role of inclusive and transparent decision-making, credible institutions, principled leadership and sustained dialogue in bridging divides and supporting negotiation outcomes that are legitimate, durable and responsive to shared challenges. DWND will also reflect on the role of the United Nations, regional organizations and other key actors in managing crises, upholding international law and renewing commitment to cooperation in a fragmented world.

Bringing together senior decision-makers, global leaders and leading voices in multilateral diplomacy and negotiation, the event will provide a forward-looking platform to consider how diplomacy can adapt to current geopolitical realities while remaining anchored in trust, accountability, dialogue and shared responsibility.
