BACKGROUND

Chaminade University of Honolulu hosts a campus-made, campus-inspired Open Market Place every semester that provides a space for Chaminade University 'ohana to sell their hand-made crafts, as well as local vendors to sell their delicious foods. Sister Malia Wong, organizer of the Open Market, is motivated by "Chaminade's commitment to transform the world through "Care for the 'Āina (land) , Care for the Self"". 'Āina provides everything needed to survive physically, emotionally, and spiritually. Therefore, it is important that we respect and mālama (care) the 'āina. Through the marketplace, visitors are able to learn about mālama 'āina through the eyes of the different sustainable entrepreneurs.
