Human trafficking, the largest slave trade in history, is a crime against humanity that poses perennial threats to human security. It involves an act of recruiting, transporting, transferring, harbouring or receiving a person through the use of force, coercion or other means, for the purpose of exploiting them. As such, it is an outright violation of human rights.

Every year, thousands of men, women and children fall into the hands of traffickers, in their own countries and abroad. Every country in the world is affected by trafficking, whether as a country of origin, transit or destination for victims.

Statistics from the UN International Labor Organization (ILO) show that there are 9.49 million people in forced labor in the Asia-Pacific region as 2005. Women and children in this region face great risk as they comprise at least 56% of the trafficking victims. At least 200,000 to 225,000 of them are trafficked from Southeast Asia annually, and most of the trafficking destinations are also within the region.

Cities in the Asia-Pacific region can substantially improve the situation by focusing and sharing experiences on the prevention of trafficking, prosecution of traffickers and the protection and reintegration of survivors. Various regional efforts are being made to combat the trafficking industry.

Human security is a concept that encompasses virtually all aspects of our life. It is also a concept inseparably related to human rights and human development. This workshop falling under the thematic area “Human Security and Safety” is the first of its kind to be conducted within the CIFAL Network. Human trafficking, the topic of this workshop, is only one of the wide-ranging issues of human security, but it is a topic worth starting with in addressing them.

With the support of the Korea International Cooperation Agency (KOICA) this workshop specifically targets security officials within local governments and cities, seeking to build their capacities in addressing trafficking in the region's urban centres. The workshop will:

- provide lectures on human security concept, regional trends in trafficking and anti-trafficking measures, and prevention of human trafficking through various good security practices at the sub-regional level;
- provide assistance for urban security officials to better map and identify local, national, and regional stakeholders for partnership;
- bring about city-to-city cooperation to improve capacity in planning and implementing security measures to prevent human trafficking.

- To increase awareness on human security and human trafficking, especially women and children, in the region;
- To identify key challenges and recognize best practices and lessons learned to prevent human trafficking and, as well as policy measures for enhancing human security at the local level;
- To have specific action plans for local implementation and follow-up of lessons learned (via city-to-city cooperation, awareness raising activities, inter-governmental coordination, and other practical implementation examples).

The workshop contents are composed of the following:

- Introduction of Human Security Concept;
- Overview on the regional trends in trafficking and anti-trafficking measures with a focus on security and policing;
- Prevention and Prosecution of Trafficking;
- Protection and reintegration of Victims;
- Introduction of toolkits and mapping matrix developed by the UN agencies.

UNITAR has developed the CITYSHARE methodology as a core method of enhancing knowledge transfer for and among municipal security officials.

The CITYSHARE methodology aims at optimizing peer learning between local security officials and other local stakeholders playing crucial roles in ensuring sustainable municipal development. The methodology consists of various processes of self-assessment, distillation, and transfer of challenges, lessons learned, and good practices between security stakeholders and resource persons. It is also composed of several tools to provide a common framework for the evaluation of experiences made by the participating cities and offer a common language for the exchange and assimilation of experiences, as well as a roadmap for action and progress. This 3-day workshop will include a shortened or rapid version of the CITYSHARE Methodology to distill specific key challenges from submitted case studies and participant interaction, to ensure contextualised discussion and focus groups on addressing key municipal challenges and the development of action plans with participants.

Workshop CITYSHARE Methodology :

- Keynote Presentations and Participatory Discussions
- Focus groups
- Case Studies from local governments security officials and Analysis
- Site Visits
- Development of outcome-oriented action plans, for short-medium term follow-up on results attained from participation in training
